School for Handicapped to Be Dedicated

Nearly 80 severely mentally retarded children moved into a new school Monday, as Columbia School, 4502 W. 186th St., opened its doors for the first time.

The new facility is specially designed for education of mentally retarded children, with two classrooms each for kindergarten, primary, intermediate, and upper grade students, as well as a miniature "home" in which the children learn how to do simple tasks, also included in the school are administration and cafeteria buildings.

Half of the school's $280,000 cost will be borne by the state, which also provides additional operating funds for its budget. Children from Torrance, Lawndale, Lennox, Inglewood, Hawthorne, Wiseburn, and Centinela Valley School Districts will attend classes there. Under the Southwest Cooperative Program the seven districts cooperate in providing schooling for children with different kinds of handicaps.

Principal Lester Foster heads a staff of seven teachers, a clerk, and custodian at the school.

Twelve million school children have vision faults.
